Climate change is highlighting the limitations of ageing commercial buildings.

No longer fully aligned with current energy efficiency standards, these infrastructures require concrete action to improve their performance and adapt to tomorrow's climate challenges.

As part of this approach, POINT.P France headquarters chose to upgrade its glazing by installing Solar Gard solar control window films, a Saint-Gobain brand.

Gaëtan Verdon, Property Assets Manager for POINT.P Île-de-France, explains: “The comfort of our employees is a priority. Faced with the ageing of some of our buildings, we were looking for an effective solution to improve working conditions while keeping investments under control. Solar Gard solar control films have enabled us to significantly reduce overheating in our workspaces.

The results achieved in several branches across the Provence-Alpes-Côte d'Azur region convinced us of the value of this solution, which is both high-performing, quick to install, and economically viable.”

Sentinel Plus Silver 20, a one-way mirror solar control film, helps limit heat gain by rejecting up to 86% of solar energy while maintaining excellent levels of natural daylight.
